Sharing and non-sharing of work-related information amongst scholars within the field of design research

Ola will present an overview of his dissertation project which concerns work-related information sharing activities within the field of design research. Empirical material is gathered through field observations and, especially, interviews with scholars in a Nordic network for research on communicative product design. The empirical setting offers a complex and heterogeneous environment with regard to the study participants’ epistemological backgrounds, geographic locations, age and academic experiences and rank. The study object is approached from a theoretical perspective grounded in practice theory and discourse analysis.
