CSU celebrates its 20th birthday

The concept of a multi-campus university was well established by the early 1960s. This was when the idea of universities being a central part of the educational system was realized. The idea was to provide a high-quality education to a greater number of people. CSU was formally established on February 2, 1969, as a public university in New South Wales. In the following years, CSU continued to grow and expand, becoming a significant player in the higher education sector in Australia. Today, CSU is one of the leading universities in the country, offering a wide range of undergraduate and postgraduate programs. The university has a strong reputation for excellence in teaching and research, and its graduates are highly sought after by employers. CSU has a reputation for being a dynamic and innovative university, continually adapting to the changing needs of society and the economy.
