

Prestigious Learning & Teaching Awards

Two members of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences have been awarded ALTC Citation Awards for 2008. The Citations are awarded by The Australian Learning and Teaching Council (formerly Carrick Institute). The citation awards are a prestigious nation-wide recognition of excellence in learning and teaching, and are awarded to 'some of the most outstanding academics and support staff in the country' according to the Council. They also carry with them an award of $10,000 per recipient. In 2008 Charles Start University received an impressive seven awards, which includes the two to members of our school.

Professor Carmen Moran, Head of School, School of Humanities & Social Sciences (left) offers her congratulations to Dr Susan Wood and Associate Professor Manohar Pawar who have received ALTC national recognition for excellence in learning and teaching in 2008.

Dr Susan Wood was given her citation: 'For innovation and excellence in subject design and delivery in the online environment leading to rich learning experiences for students'

Associate Professor Manohar Pawar was given his citation: 'For demonstrating effective leadership in international social work and social development education leading to enhanced learning and teaching resources, scholarly activities and professional development'.