Wine Analysis Equipment Demonstrators

FOSS is a supplier of laboratory analysers and instruments for the wine industry which provide winemakers with key information at critical check-points in the winemaking process. A key feature of the analysers is that they are very easy to use and provide results fast with little or no sample preparation or 'traditional' laboratory work required.

Due to the upcoming release of a new analyser instrument, we require Demonstrators to visit wineries and winemakers throughout the winemaking regions of Australia to show the new instrument to potential customers. Comprehensive training will be provided. Appointments will generally be made for Demonstrators as a result of promotional activities, although being able to identify potential customers yourself will be an advantage. Vintage experience and some knowledge of vintage laboratory analysis and interpretation would be an advantage.

Training will take place in early March with demonstrations to potential customers immediately following for a number of weeks, depending on demand. Further work later in the year will also be available. Travel to the wine making regions of Australia may be required, all expenses will be covered.

An attractive remuneration package will be offered to the right person.
